Not illustrated. 1918 Excerpt: .morning when I saw the great need I decided to take a class. After school Mrs. Bridgman took me round to visit some of the children s homes, and what a field of work lay there! Words fail to describe what some of these homes were like, but we always get a welcome. Other homes were neat and dean, and into these homes we were invited to come and sit down. I could not help feeling more and more the great need and to long for more time to help in the work. Every time we visited the yards we would find some new families, more children for our Sunday school. I did want to help Mrs. Bridgman more, but, being in business and in charge of my department, I had very little time, as visiting after dusk is impossible. There are so many ways one...
