

Microcosm: Life in 1943 (Classic Reprint) (Paperback)

By Marion Mainwaring

Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Microcosm: Life in 1943 Science School students wear what amounts to a uniform serviceable smocks, often perforated with acid holes, and kerchiefs round their hair. Their course is notoriously tough and is extremely important just now, with wartime demands for just such college-trained technicians as Dr. John A. Timm turns out every year. Lab-hungry Freshmen and Sophomores have at least a year's stab at three sciences - chemistry, physics, and biology. If they survive this and enter the Junior class, they select a major, choosing as their field of concentration organic chemistry or physics and math - test tubes and the smell of hydrogen sulphide, or logarithms and pulley-wheels. Some of the most important courses offered by the school are diagnostics, bacteriology, and courses for teacher-training in physics. There is special work in haematology and in the old standby, hospital laboratory testing. Courses in the arts and the social sciences are required of Science majors, so that they may receive a well-rounded education.
